Conversation were treated of in a scholarly and effective manner. The speaker gave no preamble but opened at once with his subject. All human beings had some means of communicating ideas, and the term conversation applied to all informa tion obtained, whether by printed, written or colloquial media. He should speak merely of the latter, and should speak of this under three heads. -requirements and uses, topics, and abuses o conversations. He then spoke eloquently of the duty we owe to society, in cultivating conversa tional babits, as well as the personal enjoyment we ourselves derive from such cultivation. Pleasant colloquial powers would more than cancel any physical deformity, instancing Richard the Third, Curran, Madam De Stael, &c. The ability to con verse well is a great lever by which we can accom plish wonders. The first requisite in conversation is a social and kind heart, that we may please by being pleased. The idea that all facts should be presented in a blunt and stern manner, is errone ous We should do with our friends as Rarey doe

The second reness, and instill gentle emotions. The second requisite is knowledge of some sort, whether obtained from books, nature, or otherwise. But this alone nor this knowledge with kindness would not be enough-we must have a social atmosphere. Grave and studious men are generally poor talkers because they think it beneath them to talk nonsense. Far better to talk nonsense than to allow

J. B. Cobb & Co., one hundred and fifty feet deep, presented last night a blaze of glory-being splea didly illuminated from front to rear. The transparency which shope out at the window announ ced to passers that "Books for the Holidays" were to be found within, and although it is well known that all manner and styles of good books are at all times to be found at Cobbs, so that this tatement might seem superfluous, vet an entrance into the store convinced visitors that there was enough extra matter to warrant the proprietors in hanging their banners on the outer wall." It would be impossible with our limited space, to enumerate the books worthy of particular notice. We can only speak of several of the most prominent and rare-among which is Audubon's Birds of America, the entire set costing $115. This is a most laborious and complete collection of the works of the renowned naturalist. The "Gallery of Famous Poets," printed on heavy tinted paper and most superbly illustrated and bound is anothe rich and worthy present for the Holldays. WOODEN VS. SILVER WATCHES.-We SAW good "sell" acted out yesterday morning as we were passing up Superior street. A countryman who had probably brought to town a load of pro duce for the market, was walking toward the Square near the Forest City Store, stopping to ook curiously into the windows of the stores and examine the arrangements for the holidays, when his eye caught sight of Goodman's big wooden watch which pointed to twenty-three minutes before four. He gazed incredulously at it for a moment, then drew up a buge warming pan of a silver watch from his capacious pocket, and compared the two His own watch had probably kept correct time for a quarter of a century, but his faith in Goodman's "city time" was complete, so he pulled from his pocket the key, and carefully set his time to compare with the other. Then, thinking of course that he was four or five hours behind his usual time of getting home, he made some rapid tracks acros the Square toward the market, giving no one ar opportunity to correct his error.
